Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

Group I, claim(s) 1, 11, drawn to a controller for controlling an intensity of a transmission signal on the basis of an intensity control signal contained in a received signal, classified in class 455, subclass 522

Group II, claim(s) 2-4, 12-13, drawn to a receiver circuit for receiving a downlink signal from a base station, a signal demodulator for dividing an output from said receiver circuit into a communication signal and a control signal, classified in class 455, subclass 550.1

Group III, claim(s) 5-6, drawn to a base station, and a portable mobile unit capable of making bi-directional wireless communication with said base station, and provided with a controller for controlling a transmission intensity of an uplink signal on the basis of an intensity control signal included in a downlink signal from the base station, classified in class 455, subclass 423.

Group IV, claim(s) 7-10, drawn to A method of generating an alarm when there is a possibility that a transmission signal in bi-directional wireless communication does not reach a base station though intensity of a received signal is within a normal range, classified in class 455, subclass

Inventions A controller for controlling an intensity of a transmission signal on the basis of an intensity control signal contained in a received signal and A method of generating an alarm when there is a possibility that a transmission signal in bi-directional wireless communication does not reach a base station though intensity of a received signal is within a normal range are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because A controller for controlling an intensity of a transmission signal and A method of generating an alarm when there is a possibility that a transmission signal in bi-directional wireless communication does not reach a base station though intensity of a received signal is within a normal range. The subcombination has separate utility such as an intensity of a transmission signal and generating an alarm.

2. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

A telephone call was made to Mr. Mike Fogarty on April 29th, 2004 at (202) 756-8000 to request an oral election to the above restriction requirement, but did not result in an election being made.
